

ACT4CITY: Workshop for independent cultural actors who act to make cities/towns better places for living

13-14 May 2016, Kotor, Montenegro

Who are the independent cultural actors dealing with CITIES and their sustainability? How do they act in public spaces, promote walking, cycling and public transport; how do they treat waste; do they involve the community in artistic projects; are they inspired by sustainable forms of energy ...? The Regional ACT4CITY workshop is intended for independent cultural actors who act to make cities and towns better places for living.

Partners in the project ACT4CITY invite you to a Regional ACT4CITY Workshop, which will take place in Kotor, Montenegro on 13-14 May. The workshop is intended for independent cultural actors who act to make cities and towns better places for living.

SUSTAINABLE CITIES

A sustainable city concept focuses on improving the quality of life in a city, including its ecological, cultural, political, institutional, social and economic components, without leaving a burden to future generations. Key features of a sustainable city are: Resources and services are accessible to all; Public transport is seen as a viable alternative to cars (it is safe and reliable); Walking and cycling is safe; Open public spaces are safe, accessible and enjoyable; Renewable resources are used; Waste is seen as a resource and is recycled wherever possible; New homes are energy efficient; There is access to affordable housing; Community links are strong; Cultural and social amenities are accessible to all.

The ACT4CITY Workshop will gather 30-35 participants for the Western Balkan and EU countries.

We remain at your disposal for any further information.
